Mapping Mother Artists in Asia, India

"I see the making of the Museum der Künstlerinnen*Berlin not just as a physical space for the display of their art, but as a site to build and to represent their collective, shared identities. The cohesiveness of the gendered art under one roof will create a resonance-one which highlights the distinctiveness of women's practices in life and art.

In this reclamation of identities emerging through bodily experiences of motherhood, domesticity as well as through alternative art practices and a more expansive understanding of the female identities; the museum will stand as a site of solidarity. A place for women artists to value their history and seek empowerment for their future."
